

Interactive Tour "Money, Price and Value"

The Money, Price and Value tour provides an interactive introduction to the subject of money and shows its many sides: money as a means of payment, a measure of value, and a store of purchasing power. But value and price are never fixed – they change. What something is worth and the price it has depends on various factors: markets, needs, or even emotions. This tour encourages students to explore these connections.

In a playful spirit, the interactive tour conveys how money, price and value are all connected and how they shape our lives every day. The programme promotes an understanding of economic interrelationships and encourages reflection on aspects of society. In addition to acquiring skills geared to the specific target group level, the tour raises awareness of the interweaving of economic concepts in the students' everyday lives.

Students encounter the phenomenon of money in an immersive, multimedia show, discuss the value of things in an auction, and discover questions of price and value from economic, social and personal perspectives while taking various expedition routes. The aim of the tour is to build a bridge to the topic of money and to talk about price and value.
